RE: Historic Gift and Renaming of the College of Architecture

Today, thanks to the generosity of Chris, Robin, and the entire Huckabee family, we celebrated a historic gift to Texas Tech University's College of Architecture.

Named in honor of Tommie J. Huckabee, the college will now be known as the Huckabee College of Architecture.

The Huckabee family has a long and storied history at Texas Tech, beginning with Tommie, who attended Texas Tech as an architecture student in the 1950s.

Their gift is focused on providing access and opportunity by funding student scholarships and enhancing the infrastructure in and around the college, making it a source of pride for all faculty, staff, students, and alumni.

We are grateful to the Huckabee family for their generosity. Read more about the 'Great Colleges to Work For®' program by clicking the button below.
